On behalf of the European Public Health Association [EUPHA], the Organizing Committee, the Scientific Committee, the Consorci de Salut i Social de Catalunya and the Andalusian School of Public Health we have the honour to invite you to the 5th European Conference on Migrant and Ethnic Minority Health.

The economic crisis that affects Europe, particularly the southern countries, has produced important changes in social and health policies. Advancing knowledge on the effects of such changes in health status and healthcare, discussing strategies to overcome negative effects and disseminating good practices will be key outcomes of the event. These issues should be analyzed by all health actors involved -researchers, epidemiologists, policy makers, health providers, NGOs, etc. The conference, thus, aims to provide these actors a forum where to share and discuss approaches of analysis and practical experiences in migrants' and ethnic minorities' health and healthcare in a context of economic restrictions.

The Conference will take place at the Andalusian School of Public Health [EASP]. Its building, inaugurated in 1991, occupies 11,200 sq.m. It has wifi access, 9 classrooms that can be equipped with portable computers, an auditorium with a seating capacity of 400 people and fitted with 2 interpretation booths. It also offers participants a computer room, two meeting rooms and and a cafeteria with gorgeous views.

EASP is located in the city of Granada, Spain, a university city with a national airport, and close to Malaga, city with an International airport. There are few cities like Granada in the world, with such jam-packed and varied history reflected so well through its streets and monuments. The historical monument complex of Alhambra and the Generalife, the jasmine-scented streets of the Moorish Albaicin, the Cathedral, the Science Park, and more to find out.
